* When you buy a new Samsung / LG TV and it comes with a 20-500 page privacy document, that's not progress!
Its Slurping-Marketed-As-Revolutionary-Technology (SMART), / Surveillance-Marketed-As-Revolutionary-Technology.
(Only Park Avenue attorneys can wade through complex privacy documents or EULA, but this is hardly the answer anyway).

* Sure, lets embrace the economic benefits of IoT, but lets also balance that by offering real tangible protections...
This is especially true regarding IoT tech for kids / elderly parents / cars / medical devices etc...

* This is probably the last chance to rectify the wild-west of tech before consumers face off with future giants of IoT.
Introduce protections for people now or all our personal info will end up in the wild, abused by hackers / spammers / reckless corporations!

* We have Googhoul-Facebag-Micrsosap etc to play privacy whack-a-mole with now, but in a decade it may be everybody!
